Description:

From For all the frustrated admirers of Martha Stewart, who love her style but fear that her methods are hard to duplicate, and her standards impossible to meet, there is Lancaster, best-selling author of Bitter Is the New Black (2005) and Jeneration X (2012). Lancaster chronicles a year she spent aiming for some semblance of the Martha Stewart life in her own suburban household with a skeptical husband and unruly pets. Pummeled by money problems and career setbacks, she channeled her considerable energy into searching for the Tao of Martha, turning her chaotic household into blissful party-hosting, handmade gift-giving, and converting the Drawer of Shame into an orderly repository. Lancaster includes photos, many of her dogs, in this amusing, yearlong romp through the holidays and everyday living in a tribute to Martha Stewart and all women doing the best they can. --Vanessa Bush
